

Oceania Academy Listening and Sharing session

From colonial policies to community well-being: exploring the organization of services for First Nations children, lessons from two Canadian provinces

Join us in our free listening and sharing session

16:30, April 29th Australian EST

This interactive AusACPDM Listening and Sharing session will be about:

This session will provide an overview of the legislative system in Canada as it relates to the organisation and funding of rehabilitation services for First Nations children. It will offer insights into how colonial policies continue to shape the organisation, delivery, and accessibility of services for First Nations families. The session will also highlight the importance of clinicians being informed about policies that affect the lives of the families they work with. Emphasis will be placed on how clinicians can best support families and contribute to the provision of culturally responsive and equitable care.

This session will be of interest to clinicians, researchers, students and people with lived experience.

Presenters include: By Rosalie Dostie Pht., MSc., PhD Candidate, Université de Sherbrooke, Canada

The session will be facilitated by: TBC